Your new custom website can be up and running on the internet within 2 weeks, if you can provide all of the content and choose a design.

How Many Passwords do You Have?

Too Many? This Software Can Help!

Every so often, I find a nifty software product or electronic gadget that I find so useful that I feel obligated to tell people about it. Like many of you, I use the internet daily for a variety of purposes, including research, website design ideas, banking and shopping. If, like me, you have dozens of user accounts on the websites you use most often, each with its own login ID and password, it's impossible to keep track of them all.

I used to have a list in my palm pilot, which was not secure at all. I also used to reuse the same password on almost everything, which is another huge issue. Just imagine if my password fell into the wrong hands - that person could get into my bank account, credit cards, everything! That concerned me a lot, so I went looking for a better way.

I found it in a software package called RoboForm. It keeps track of all of my ID and password information, and keeps it encrypted. It also allows me to generate random passwords, so I've now changed all of mine to be different. It saves the web address, user ID and password for all of the sites that I use. I can simply click on one button, and it goes to the site and logs me in securely. I use the "RoboForm To Go" version, which resides on my flash (thumb) drive. There's also a version that can be stored on your desktop or laptop computer.

For more information on this simple and inexpensive solution to a potential security nightmare, see the link below. I highly recommend it.
